These heifers are out of high production Holstein females geared to maximize milk production. They also inherited the frame size and pelvic structure of the Holstein, giving them more ease when calving out those high birthweight babies. You can handle these heifers time and time again and they will be just as calm from the first to the last. These females aren't just built for recip programs though! They would make exceptional commercial ranching cows that you could use any beef breed bull on. They will raise up some massive yearlings with rapid weight gain and excellent marketability!
